

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

LETTERS ON THE MINISTRY OF THE GOSPEL. By FRENCH WAYLAND. 12mo. pp. 210. Gould & Lincoln. New-York: Sheldon & Co.

The eminent name of the author of this volume will not attract more attention to its contents, than to the novel, not to say revolutionary, character of its teachings. Among other symptoms and fruits of the effervescence of the age in regard to the highest subjects of thought, it must be regarded as of no common significance, and the earnest practical application of the pulpit is rapidly decreasing. Not that ministers are not treated well so far as this world is concerned, but that their preaching produces less and less effect upon the public mind, that the message of salvation is heard with less and less interest and concern.

"Since I commenced writing these pages," says President Wayland, "I happened to fall into conversation on this subject with a friend who has arrived at high distinction as a lawyer and a legislator.

I inquired of him what was the opinion of gentlemen of his profession on the subject of the Christian religion, when they conversed freely with each other in their professional meetings. He replied: 'They think religion a very useful thing for promoting the good order of society and reducing the number of policemen, and they are willing to contribute to its support; but that is all. As to its necessity for the salvation of the soul,—or, in fact,

as to its importance for anything else than the present life,—they have no belief at all."

The remedy for the evils so forcibly described by the author is set forth with his usual frankness and energy. In the course of the discussion he gives an interesting account of his own professional experience, which forms an admirable specimen of auto-biographical narrative, disarming criticism by its simplicity, while it challenges attention by the transparent honesty of its details.

No doubt the ground

taken by the distinguished writer of this volume is extreme. He pushes his argument to its utmost limits. He slightly notices, or does not notice at all, the numerous exceptions to his position, even allowing in general truth. He assumes without proof that the primitive model is the rule and standard for every age. But his pages are filled with highly suggestive remarks, and cannot fail to call forth many

reflections and questionings among those to whom

they are especially addressed.

LIFE IN THE OPEN AIR AND OTHER PAPERS. By THOMAS WINTROP. 12mo. pp. 274. Ticknor & Fields.

In addition to the breezy sketches of mountain travel which compose a large portion of this volume—the last in the series of the posthumous writings of the martyred author—contains the military articles, describing the "March of the Seventh Regiment," "Washington as a Camp," and "Fortress Monroe," which derive a tender interest from being the first-fruits of an experience that was so soon closed in the crowning glory of an heroic death. Beneath their light and comic exterior, they furnish frequent glimpses of the finer qualities of Theodore Winthrop's rare nature, his romantic devotion to a noble ideal, his chivalrous sense of honor, his unselfish enthusiasm for a great cause, as well as the boldness and versatility of his intellect. Few volumes are so deeply marked with the spirit of the man, so little by the arts of the author. His interest

as a memorial of character is still greater than its value as a literary production.

GOOD THOUGHTS IN BAD TIMES. AND OTHER PAPERS. By THOMAS FULLER. D. D. 12mo. pp. 287. Ticknor & Fields.

No time could be more suitable than the present for reproducing the good thoughts of the wise and witty divine, who, according to Coleridge, was "incomparably the most sensible, the least prejudiced great man in an age that boasted of a galaxy of great men." With him divinity was not in discord with humanity, religion were not an aspect of terror, but a countenance of smiling earnestness; "it was natural that he should be full of mirth as it is for the grasshopper to chirp, or bee to hum, or the birds to warble in the Spring breeze and bright sunshine." He was a chaplain in the royal army during the great civil war in England, using his benign authority to mitigate the violence of hostile parties. Many of his golden sentences possess a special pertinence to the present state of things in our own country, and might profitably be laid to heart by men of all parties.

COMMON PRAYER FOR CHRISTIAN WORSHIP. 12mo. pp. 257. Walker, Wise & Co.

The manual of public worship prepared by the Rev. James Martineau for the use of dissenting Churches in England is here reprinted, with a few necessary changes and omissions to adapt it to the requirements of religious societies in this country. It contains ten general services for morning and evening worship, collects before or after sermon, and special form for the communion, baptism, marriage, burial, and other religious occasions. In point of theology, the volume aims at the expression of opinions which are held in common by the various sects of Christians, rather than at the illustration of any peculiar creed. The language of the services is deeply tinged with Scriptural phraseology, and has been happily preserved from unwise attempts at rhetorical embellishments.

TRIUMPH OF THE BIBLE, WITH THE TESTIMONY OF SCIENCE TO ITS TRUTH. By the Rev. HENRY TELLING. A. M. 12mo. pp. 430. Charles Scribner.

The design of this volume is to furnish a treatise on the evidences of Christianity, in accordance with the scientific progress of the age. In introducing the subject, the author presents a condensed view of the triumphs of the Bible as illustrated by the course of history. He then considers the testimony to its truth afforded by geology, astronomy, and other branches of physical science; and closes his argument by considerations derived from chronology, geography, and archaeology. A large portion of the work is devoted to extracts from other writers, which give it the air of a compilation, rather than of an original discussion, and tends to diminish its effect with the mass of readers.

DRIFTING ABOUT, OR WHAT JEEMS PIPES OF PEPISVILLE SAW AND DID. An Autobiography by STEPHEN C. MARKET. 12mo. pp. 350. Carleton.

A good-natured, gossipy, egotistic description of men and things encountered by the author, who seems to have touched for a time at all the remarkable places on the globe, is given in this multifarious autobiography. He writes without reserve or scruple, drags in by the hair of the head the numerous celebrities with whose acquaintance he has been favored, is never weary of the sound of his own voice, and with a good deal of rubbish which affords material for his volatile chat, his book contains many entertaining reminiscences of the last twenty years in almost every civilized and uncivilized land.

The American Publishers' Circular, formerly

conducted by Mr. Charles Ede, in this city, has been removed to Philadelphia, and is now issued by

Mr. George W. Childs. The first two numbers of the new series have recently made their appearance, and will now be published regularly on the 1st and 15th of each month.

The work promises to be a valuable and interesting contribution to American periodical literature. In addition to the usual array of book-selling advertisements, which are not to be regarded as a merely business point of view, but as a suggestive

indication of the mental activity of the day, it contains a great variety of literary intelligence, both

foreign and domestic; ecclesiastic notices of prominent persons connected with literature; brief, but instructive and impartial sketches of new publications; and copious announcements and catalogues of forthcoming and recently published books. The prepa-

ture with mist, which, however bright, is pannions. There is no idea on the subject of man's salvation which cannot be expressed in plain Saxon English.

The arrangements for public worship, moreover, are becoming so expensive that the greater portion of the middle classes, and nearly all the poor, are excluded from the churches. Upon the wealthier and more highly educated classes, the influence of the pulpit is rapidly decreasing. Not that ministers are not treated well so far as this world is concerned, but that their preaching produces less and less effect upon the public mind, that the message of salvation is heard with less and less interest and concern.

"Since I commenced writing these pages," says President Wayland, "I happened to fall into conversation on this subject with a friend who has arrived at high distinction as a lawyer and a legislator. I inquired of him what was the opinion of gentlemen of his profession on the subject of the Christian religion, when they conversed freely with each other in their professional meetings. He replied: 'They think religion a very useful thing for promoting the good order of society and reducing the number of policemen, and they are willing to contribute to its support; but that is all. As to its necessity for the salvation of the soul,—or, in fact, as to its importance for anything else than the present life,—they have no belief at all.'

The remedy for the evils so forcibly described by the author is set forth with his usual frankness and energy. In the course of the discussion he gives an interesting account of his own professional experience, which forms an admirable specimen of auto-biographical narrative, disarming criticism by its simplicity, while it challenges attention by the transparent honesty of its details.

No doubt the ground taken by the distinguished writer of this volume is extreme. He pushes his argument to its utmost limits. He slightly notices, or does not notice at all, the numerous exceptions to his position, even allowing in general truth. He assumes without proof that the primitive model is the rule and standard for every age. But his pages are filled with highly suggestive remarks, and cannot fail to call forth many

reflections and questionings among those to whom

they are especially addressed.

LIFE IN THE OPEN AIR AND OTHER PAPERS. By THOMAS WINTROP. 12mo. pp. 274. Ticknor & Fields.

In addition to the breezy sketches of mountain travel which compose a large portion of this volume—the last in the series of the posthumous writings of the martyred author—contains the military articles, describing the "March of the Seventh Regiment," "Washington as a Camp," and "Fortress Monroe," which derive a tender interest from being the first-fruits of an experience that was so soon closed in the crowning glory of an heroic death. Beneath their light and comic exterior, they furnish frequent glimpses of the finer qualities of Theodore Winthrop's rare nature, his romantic devotion to a noble ideal, his chivalrous sense of honor, his unselfish enthusiasm for a great cause, as well as the boldness and versatility of his intellect. Few volumes are so deeply marked with the spirit of the man, so little by the arts of the author. His interest

as a memorial of character is still greater than its

value as a literary production.

GOOD THOUGHTS IN BAD TIMES. AND OTHER PAPERS. By THOMAS FULLER. D. D. 12mo. pp. 287. Ticknor & Fields.

No time could be more suitable than the present for reproducing the good thoughts of the wise and witty divine, who, according to Coleridge, was "incomparably the most sensible, the least prejudiced great man in an age that boasted of a galaxy of great men." With him divinity was not in discord with humanity, religion were not an aspect of terror, but a countenance of smiling earnestness; "it was natural that he should be full of mirth as it is for the grasshopper to chirp, or bee to hum, or the birds to warble in the Spring breeze and bright sunshine." He was a chaplain in the royal army during the great civil war in England, using his benign authority to mitigate the violence of hostile parties. Many of his golden sentences possess a special pertinence to the present state of things in our own country, and might profitably be laid to heart by men of all parties.

COMMON PRAYER FOR CHRISTIAN WORSHIP. 12mo. pp. 257. Walker, Wise & Co.

The manual of public worship prepared by the Rev. James Martineau for the use of dissenting Churches in England is here reprinted, with a few necessary changes and omissions to adapt it to the requirements of religious societies in this country. It contains ten general services for morning and evening worship, collects before or after sermon, and special form for the communion, baptism, marriage, burial, and other religious occasions. In point of theology, the volume aims at the expression of opinions which are held in common by the various sects of Christians, rather than at the illustration of any peculiar creed. The language of the services is deeply tinged with Scriptural phraseology, and has been happily preserved from unwise attempts at rhetorical embellishments.

TRIUMPH OF THE BIBLE, WITH THE TESTIMONY OF SCIENCE TO ITS TRUTH. By the Rev. HENRY TELLING. A. M. 12mo. pp. 430. Charles Scribner.

The design of this volume is to furnish a treatise on the evidences of Christianity, in accordance with the scientific progress of the age. In introducing the subject, the author presents a condensed view of the triumphs of the Bible as illustrated by the course of history. He then considers the testimony to its truth afforded by geology, astronomy, and other branches of physical science; and closes his argument by considerations derived from chronology, geography, and archaeology. A large portion of the work is devoted to extracts from other writers, which give it the air of a compilation, rather than of an original discussion, and tends to diminish its effect with the mass of readers.

The American Publishers' Circular, formerly

conducted by Mr. Charles Ede, in this city, has been removed to Philadelphia, and is now issued by

Mr. George W. Childs. The first two numbers of the new series have recently made their appearance, and will now be published regularly on the 1st and 15th of each month.

The work promises to be a valuable and interesting contribution to American periodical literature. In addition to the usual array of book-selling advertisements, which are not to be regarded as a merely business point of view, but as a suggestive

indication of the mental activity of the day, it

contains a great variety of literary intelligence, both

foreign and domestic; ecclesiastic notices of prominent persons connected with literature; brief, but instructive and impartial sketches of new publications; and copious announcements and catalogues of forthcoming and recently published books. The prepa-

tion of these numbers evinces intelligence and care. The conductors have evidently aimed at accuracy and precision as well as completeness, and have not been contented with a superficial and slovenly performance of their task. Although designed for special reference to the wants of "the trade," on which it must rely mainly for support, the "Circular" may be consulted with advantage by every library man, and will doubtless prove an attractive and useful publication to readers of bibliographical tastes.

Books Received.

The Races of the Old World. A Manual of Ethnology. By CHARLES L. BRACE. 12mo. pp. 540. Charles Scribner. Paris in America. By JAMES P. COOPER. Translated by ERIC S. BROWN. 12mo. pp. 572. The Same. The History of the Supernatural. By WILLIAM HOWITT. 2 vols. 12mo. J. L. LIPPINCOTT & CO.

The Initials: A Story of Modern Life. 12mo. pp. 402. T. B. PEPPER & BROOKS.

Good Books and Bad Times, and Other Papers. By THOMAS FULLER. D. D. 12mo. pp. 277. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the Open Air, and Other Papers. By THEODORE WHITMORE. 12mo. pp. 274. TICKNER & FIELD.

Life in the